

The esteemed ML-1860 yields 1500 A4 pages at 5% toner coverage. To reset the cartridge you need to buy a toner chip or reprogram it (if you have experience). The toner chip will cost 300 p, reprogramming will cost about 250 p. This is much better than buying a new cartridge. The chip is part of the cartridge. On my ML-1020M (I think) this chip is a separate metal thing, which is attached to the cartridge with a few ties. If you have experience reprogramming the chip, you won't have a problem. About the "chip not working" thing. The cartridge has a chip that runs at 900 MHz. When the chip "dies", an emergency mode is activated.
