Understanding the EFI The Electronic File Interchange, or EFI, is a special file format created by Adobe that compresses the RAW format and delivers it in a highly compressed format. The EFI format is efficient, and it makes files quite small. Adobe adopted the EFI in 1993 as a new RAW file format that it called the E-RAW format. It soon changed to the Adobe RAW format. In the past, designers could only edit color images in the RAW format. Today, you can use Photoshop to edit both color and black-and-white images in the RAW format. You can save a single image as an EFI by using the EFI format (see Figure 1-9) from the File menu. Figure 1-9: The File menu includes a format option for the EFI format.

(from Wikipedia) Image Source Photo Editors If you are dealing with RAW images, Photoshop is undoubtedly one of the best tools in the creative workflow. If not using RAW, the best way is to simply edit your images directly in Photoshop, I don't see the point in using a photo editor for it. I myself use Photoshop to edit RAW or JPG. But, if you are just starting out, I highly recommend you start with Photo Editor. Download Photoshop CS6 – $689.00 (After saving any used presets, you should end up paying $655.00) Photoshop CC – $829.00 (After saving any used presets, you should end up paying $769.00) Photoshop Elements 9 – $79.00 (After saving any used presets, you should end up paying $129.00) Photoshop Elements 8 – $59.00 (After saving any used presets, you should end up paying $99.00) Photoshop Elements 10 – $109.00 (After saving any used presets, you should end up paying $149.00) Photoshop Elements 8.1 – $79.00 (After saving any used presets, you should end up paying $149.00) Photo Editor Software For beginners, you can start by using the Photo Editor Software, it is an image editing software that allows you to create images from scratch or edit a pre-existing ones. PSE9 – $79.00 Adobe Photoshop Express – $129.00 Image Source Resize I'm sure you're familiar with the term "Resizing images." Although the process is simple, it may not be that simple at all. The order of operations for resizing an image is: 1. Outsource the work to an editor or third-party service 2. Download the image and upload to your editor of choice 3. Edit image on your editor 4. Export to a new image format 5. Upload to your social media I use Wix to resize images. It's a premium service. When the Atlanta Braves drafted high school outfielder Preston Tucker in the third round of the 2017 MLB Draft back in June, it seemed like a sure thing that his immediate future would be with the team. However, as Tucker arrived in Florida earlier this week, he began to realize that he was being sent away from home, and it was not for any fault of his own. When his former high school team, James Logan High School (Loganville, Ga.), went on a softball road trip to Tennessee, Tucker decided to tag along and stay in Nashville for the weekend. That's where the 22-year-old Tucker was informed that he was being traded. "I was like, 'What? I was just getting ready to go home,'" Tucker said on an Atlanta Braves beat radio show. "We came to this team wanting to work hard and get better." When Tucker was informed that he was being traded, he was given two options: trade him immediately or have him go home. Tucker chose the latter, and left the team hotel and returned home. Upon his return to the States, he found out that his life was about to change forever. "I was just like, 'They traded me?'" Tucker said of learning of the trade. "Everything happens for a reason, and I want to get to the team that works best for me." After the Braves, the San Diego Padres have been Tucker's team of choice since being traded. It is expected that the Padres will send him back to the Atlanta-based affiliate where he will not only be able to play but help train. "I like the Braves and everything Atlanta, but I'm just excited to get to San Diego," Tucker said. "I'm really excited for my next team. They'll take me and everything that I've learned and grow." Ultimately, Tucker wants to continue to be a role model for the younger kids and make a difference in other peoples' lives. "I have a lot of love for baseball," Tucker said. "I just want to keep playing baseball and help people." #SanDiegoPadres @PrestonTucker_13 signed with the Padres after he was traded here from the #Braves. pic.twitter.com

Local News Billy Blanks' legacy for boxing will continue In front of a packed house, a stellar cast of heavyweight boxers took to the stage Tuesday to pay their respects to the late Billy "The Kid" Blanks, a legendary gym owner and trainer who died last summer. The 12-man tribute took the stage at the Downtown Athletic Club in Manhattan, where Blanks last worked as a trainer, and featured seven of Blanks' former boxers — all of whom excelled during their boxing careers and credited Blanks for providing the knowledge and guidance that helped them become fighters. His mother, who shared the stage with the fighters, said that boxing has given her three life-changing marriages, four sons and one grandson, all of whom were inspired and encouraged by Blanks' boxing. According to the Eastside Boxing Club, Blanks started boxing in the early 1940s, primarily playing both a wing and center during his childhood on Brooklyn's Far Rockaway Beach. He soon began working as a bellman at the Queensboro Athletic Club, where he earned a reputation as a fighter and a superb boxer. After a year of working at the Queensboro Athletic Club, Blanks began working at New York's West Side Gym, where he also worked as a fighter and trainer. He quickly became a trainer at the club and began to train a number of top-level boxers, including future World Heavyweight Champion Joe Louis. Over the years, Blanks became one of the best trainers in the boxing world, most notably working with current WBO Champion Andre Ward, as well as a few top-ranked fighters, including Lennox Lewis, Sharmba Mitchell and Donald Curry. Billy Blanks died in August of last year after a long battle with pancreatic cancer. He was 71. His final training session was on June 29, when he was working with heavyweight prospect Dariusz Skorupski. The session was held at the Westside Athletic Club. For more information on Billy Blanks, including the book he wrote on boxing, "The Perfect Trainer," and a documentary on his life, "One Man's Fight," visit BillyBlanksTribute.com.
